

SHINY foreheads, waxy cheeks, barely the hint of a wrinkle... yes, we couldn't help but notice a few favourite A-listers are looking suspiciously well-preserved of late.

Despite the fact all three left their twenties long ago, Jennifer Lopez, Kate Moss and Cameron Diaz boast the youthful complexions of women half their age. Their flawless faces have even prompted us to coin a new term at Grazia HQ – the “China Doll” club.

Cam, who turns 40 in August, was the talk of Couture Week, as much for her seriously smooth forehead as for her arsenal of designer outfits.

She's already had a nose job – in 2006 to correct damage from a skiing accident – and has been open about the possibility of having further work down the track. “I'll never say never to anything,” she told British Vogue.

As for Mossy, 38, you wouldn't expect her to have such glowing skin after years of smoking and binge drinking, yet it only seems to get better with age. She certainly looked like she'd taken a swig from the fountain of youth at a campaign launch last week, prompting whispers of Botox (she once said she'd consider surgery “if I got all saggy”).

And there's no denying that, at 42, J-Lo has a remarkably unlined face. Late last year she denied having had any work done, but she did tell US Glamour: “I'd like to think I'll feel great about myself and age gracefully, but then I think: ‘Well, what if I do want a little bit of something?’ I'm open to [it].”

Dr Joseph Hkeik, medical director of All Saints Cosmedical Clinic in Sydney, tells Grazia all three women have undoubtedly undergone “a little freshening up”.

“I can guarantee all of them have had some work done very recently – Botox, volumising fillers or laser resurfacing,” he says. “That's what's giving them that flawless, shiny skin and full-faced ‘doll’ look, particularly in the cheek, eye and forehead areas.”

“All three procedures require minimal downtime... there'd be about half a day of redness and swelling and then they'd be ready to walk the red carpet, looking fresh.”

He does, however, warn against going too far: “Anything in excess is a mistake, and too much Botox or filler around your eyes completely changes the characteristics of your face. The golden rule should always be less is more.”

Take note, ladies!
